Title: Ensuring young voices are heard in core outcome set development: international workshops with 70 children and young people

Version: 0 Date: 13 Jan 2020

Reviewer: Angela Polanco

Reviewer's report:

The article was of great interest to the reviewer and the planning, delivery and commentary of the results was well executed and understandable to the reader. I would have liked to have seen that the participants were offered follow-up or signposting to relevant agencies if they felt distressed at participating and/or after the event. I would be interested to see if the results from this article then would lead to the development of the core outcomes for children and young people and a recommendation for this in the article. Overall the article was clear, concise and of interest to the reader and fits well within the selected journal audience. Please consider very minor grammar correction for first sentence of abstract 'Researchers working on different research studies often measure different treatment outcomes, despite investigating the same health condition.' The use of 'different' twice in one sentence could be improved.
