Title: A review of accelerometer-derived physical activity in the idiopathic inflammatory myopathies

Version: 0 Date: 10 Jun 2019

Reviewer's report:

This is a well written narrative review. It suffers from lack of source information in the topic and the authors try to compensate by analyzing in detail each one of the few studies that they could find in the topic. The authors display their intimate knowledge on the topic of accelerometers and the technical aspect of their use in rheumatic and musculoskeletal diseases.

My comment and suggestion would be: Give the lack of information and the novelty of the topic, why did the authors did not decide to include major conference abstracts from say, the last 2 years? I possible that these would not offer the level of detail they need to compare with other studies, but could have been informative given the paucity of data.
